- f) Event Description: The Paralympics are games that allow athletes with disabilities to participate in an international competition against athletes with similar or the same disabilities. There are five different disability groups that are registered in the games. There are nineteen different sports, four of which are unique to the Paralympics. 'Para' refers to the Greek term 'beside' or 'alongside'. They chose this because it refers to the fact that members of each movement didn't want the Olympics and Paralympics to be seen as two competing events, instead they wanted it to be seen as existing side-by-side. Because the athletes competing in the Paralympics have certain disabilities they are allowed concessions that may help them compete competitively, but do not give them an unfair advantage over other competitors. Under this agreement, #TeamCCL will provide sports training and facilities to 500 intellectually challenged persons for 3 years to ensure their participation in various sports events.
