The program was to raise public awareness about devastating health, social and economic consequences of TB and to step up efforts to end the pandemic. TB, being world's deadliest infectious killer, the death increased highest for the first time in decades in 2020. However, when it comes to combating infectious disease and associated risks in the work environment, a workplace intervention acts as a keystone. Mines are especially at the risk of TB since they usually work in cramped, underground mines, where ventilation is compromised and temperatures are extreme. Additionally, prolonged exposure to chemicals and coal dust also weaken their lungs considerably.

ECL provides quality diagnostic and treatment services for TB to all the employees through a well-established medical set up. ECL also follows Revised National Tuberculosis Control Program (RNTCP) guidelines to treat indoor patients and refer the outdoor patients to District TB Cell. There is a budgetary provision for delivering comprehensive medical services. For specialized TB tests not available at ECL, patients are referred to the empanelled tertiary care hospitals. Medical reimbursements are given to employees who have purchased privately.
